Food and Agricultural Immunology

Food and Agricultural Immunology is a new international quarterly scientific journal, to be published from March 1989, which will feature original immunological research with food, agricultural, environmental and veterinary applications. It will draw on research of relevance to analysts, immunologists, microbiologists, nutritionists, and toxicologists, as well as all food scientists and technologists.

The primary focus of the journal will be on research exploiting antibodies and the immune response with food and agricultural applications. The journal will also publish papers directed towards understanding interactions at the interface of the food and immune systems. Review articles and short papers containing 'exceptional', preliminary information, will also be published.

CONTRIBUTIONS

Contributions to this journal are welcome. Please send three copies of your manuscript to Dr M.R.A. Morgan, AFRC Institute of Food Research, Norwich Laboratory, Colney Lane, Norwich NR4 7UA, UK. All submissions will be independently refereed.

Food and Agricultural Immunology will be published quarterly, in March, June, September and December. These four issues will constitute one volume. The first issue will appear in March 1989. An annual index and title-page will be bound in the December issue.

1989—Volume 1. ISSN 0954–0105.
